REIMAGINED HACIENDA

With extensive remodeling, Alison and Lenny Comma have created their dream home with a Spanish hacienda look and feel. Artful tiles, a wine room with wrought iron railings, handcrafted furniture made in India and China, Mexican and Native American art, and fireplaces with reclaimed railroad ties are just a few of the many standout features in their expansive and graceful Vista residence. The couple has chosen natural material throughout the home including hardwoods, natural stone and oil-rubbed bronze. The kitchen has custom cabinets, Spanish tiles and woodwork on the ceiling. Their sons' bedrooms reflect their interest in surfing, music and athletics. A pool with a dramatic waterfall feature, patios, plants and trees create a tranquil outdoor space.

A FAMILY HOME, BUILT BY FAMILY

Ten years ago, when long-time Vista residents Rudy and Teri Lopez set out to build their home, they drew on the construction expertise of their family members. Two years in the making, the result of the family endeavor is a beautiful one-story Spanish contemporary home with a solid mahogany front door, travertine floors, large windows and distressed alder cabinets. The kitchen is the heart of holiday festivities that draw Lopez family members from San Diego and Orange counties, and Arizona. It has a six-burner stove, double convection ovens and granite counter tops. The centerpiece of the backyard is the pool surrounded by king, queen, sego and pygmy date palms. Red, orange and yellow hibiscus shrubs add bursts of color.

LIGHT, ART, SPACE AND WARMTH

Since moving to their spacious Vista residence last year, former New York City residents Lauren and Matthew Lieberman have added some very special touches to make the home uniquely their own. The entrance, framed by olive trees, leads to a living room with high ceilings and rustic wooden beams. Its white walls are dotted with art work created by Lauren and the couple's two young daughters. Comfortable and casual, the home's interiors are filled with family heirlooms and furniture that Lauren has found in thrift shops and flea markets. The girls' rooms have a whimsical feel with furniture painted with chalk paint. The large balcony offers spectacular views of the sunset and July 4 fireworks in Brengle Terrace Park. Beautiful palms and tropical plants dot the expansive backyard.

ANCHORED IN MAINE

Doreen Quinn has captured the warmth, character and memories of her Maine childhood in her beautiful Victorian home with a carefully chosen mix of family heirlooms and estate sale finds, many of them more than 100 years old. Visitors to her home will find a hutch made in Pennsylvania, a French armoire, an Irish church pew, a Victorian dining table, a Persian anniversary rug, New England folk art, and black and white photos by a New England photographer. While keeping with the original architecture, the kitchen has been remodeled with soapstone countertops, white subway tile, a white apron sink, and new cabinet knobs and faucets. The serene outdoors are dotted with many porches, fruit trees, and rose, raspberry and blueberry bushes.

REVISITING THE PAST

Considered to be one of the best preserved historical sites in the state of California, the Rancho Buena Vista Adobe has been a part of Holiday Homes Tour since 1986. The sprawling historic residence was built in the mid-1800s and home to many prominent local families and Hollywood personalities. As graceful today as in its early years, the adobe has a carefully tended garden, an art gallery and more than 20 rooms decorated with period furnishings and art that evoke the life and times of 19th century California. Today, Rancho Buena Vista Adobe is a popular destination for visitors and school groups eager to learn about the region's history, and a sought after locale for weddings.

We look forward to welcoming you on Dec. 6 at the Holiday Homes Tour!
